Art Unit: 1714

1. The amendment of 4/3/07 has been entered. Claims 15-34 are pending.

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 15-20, 24-28, and 31 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by US Pat. No. 3676478 Golitz et al. with US Pat. No. 5118290 Muller et al. being cited as evidence.

Golitz discloses and claims a polymer containing terminal alkoxysilane functional groups attached via a methylene group attached to a urea group in which the N attached to the methylene group may be substituted with an aryl group, which falls within the scope of the instantly claimed group A. The applicant attributes the instantly claimed skin formation times to these functional groups and the presence or not of catalyst. The patentee is silent as to skin formation times. It is expected that where the claimed component of the patentee has the instantly claimed group A attaching the methylenealkoxysilane group to the polymer and no catalyst it will inherently have the instantly claimed skin forming time of claimed requirement a. If catalyst were added, and it is not required by all of the above claims, some catalyst in some amount within the scope of the instant claims would have been expected to give the shorter skin forming time of claimed requirement b as evidenced by the teaching of Muller et al. that catalysts accelerate crosslinking at column 4, lines 13-19. The skilled artisan understands that a main function of catalyst is to accelerate the reaction rate. There is no evidence commensurate in scope with the instant claims and the cited prior art that the polymers per se, containing the claimed terminal alkoxysilane groups attached with the instantly claimed functional groups, of the patentee do not have the instantly claimed skin formation times in the absence of catalyst and the presence of catalyst. This intermediate polymer does not contain the components excluded by the instant claims 16-17, 19, 20, and 31. The catalysts of claims 24-26 are not required in the claimed composition, but must merely be used in the claimed tests. Thus, it remains unseen that the compounds of claims 24-26 do not give the instantly claimed skin formation times in the polymer of the patentee discussed above. The traces of unreacted aminosilane argued by the applicant at page 11, first full paragraph of their response are bases within the scope of the instant claim 27. The method of placing them in the above discussed composition of the patentee falls within the scope of the method of the instant claim 27. The method of use implied by column 1, lines 70-71 of the patentee fall within the scope of the composition of the instant claim 28.

The applicant's arguments have been fully considered but are not persuasive for the reasons stated above. The applicant has not shown that the instantly claimed curing times are not inherent necessarily for the references polymers discussed above. 50% relative atmospheric humidity is not particularly a high concentration of water. The time claimed is not particularly long particularly where no catalyst is present. The applicant's specification and prior arguments regarding reactivity of the claimed resins and consequently those of the patentee are such that the examiner maintains this position in the absence of probative evidence of the patentee's polyurethane's, as discussed above, reactivities. The PTO has no such facilities to do experiments and the applicant has not provided such evidence. The applicant's arguments relating to parameters not included nor excluded by the instant claims are not persuasive where they are not commensurate in scope with the instant claims and the cited prior art. This rejection is therefore maintained.

5. Claims 21-23, 29-30, and 32-34 are allowable over the prior art considered. The prior art considered does not teach the use of the instantly claimed catalysts in the instantly claimed compositions nor that they would give the instantly claimed skinning rates.

6. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

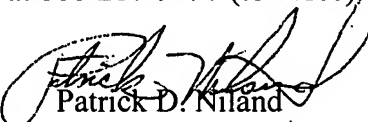

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
